

A Note About Volunteers on Campus

At Kilo we have been gifted with the time of a number of adults who regularly come on campus during lunches to make connections with students and to increase our adult presence. The dean of students from TJHS comes once a week, a parent volunteer meets with a boys group regularly and several volunteers from a local church also come weekly to connect with students. In every case, the visitors have had background checks and have been given clear guidelines as to how to interact with students. In the case of the boys group, parent permission was obtained prior to participation. We are so fortunate that these volunteers take their time to be with our students. If for any reason, you have concerns about ANY adult on campus please let us know immediately.
