What does a Family Liaison do? Good question. A school family liaison helps families and schools support each other. We help families know what's going on at school and how to help. We help schools support families by answering questions about school, working one-on-one with families to help students, finding community resources to help with family needs, and helping families find out about and get the most from school programs. When families and schools support each other - families, schools and students do better.

What's your Power Goal?

Ask your child regularly. Power goals are easy-to-learn skills to help students get to the next reading level. Early goals are "Point to each word" or "Say the first sound". Later, students will "Use Rhyming Words" or "Chunk Multisyllabic Words".

Family Tip: Families often ask "how can I make sure my child does their best in school?" The 2 most important things families do to help students are #1 – make sure children attend school every day and #2 listen to students of all ages read out loud at home for 15-30 minutes each day. Excellent attendance is a great habit to start in kindergarten so your child gets the most learning, graduates on time, and is a strong candidate for college or career opportunities after graduation. Reading is the key to all other learning so helping your child master their reading skills by listening to them read will help them in all their life work and education.
